The Bentley Garden

This is an English cottage-garden in a Pacific Northwest setting. Beside the driveway is a woodland area, with no definite boundary between garden and forest, planted with ferns, rhododendrons, hydrangeas and hostas. A gravel path leads to the back, where climbing roses bloom against the high cedar hedge, and continues past perennials and shrubs, around the pond to the great lawn and gazebo. This offers the perfect spot for Tea, and a view of the wide perennial border.
